Script

Last weekend, I woke up very early because I was meeting my friend for breakfast and we had a typical English breakfast with sausages and eggs and bacon and beans, and then I went back home and realxed, and took my dog for a walk. It was really lovely weather, so she was, my dog was very happy. In the evening, I went to the cinema with another friend, and watched «Harry Potter».

On Sunday, I ate a really big traditional English Sunday roast dinner with my family, and we had roast chicken and lots of vegetables and potatoes. And it was a bit cold that day, so we stayed inside and watched television in the evening.

Follow-up work:

Talking about food and culture

→ differences between British and Reunionese eating habits (food, times, etc...)

→ Traditional English Sunday roast VS Traditional Reunionese Sunday picnic

→ Questioning Traditional VS New Reunionese eating habits

Exercise 1: When the British have traditionnal Sunday roast dinners, in Reunion we like having picnics on Sundays. Imagine you are organizing a Sunday picnic with you family. What food are you bringing/cooking? Write down the items in the chart. Compare with what a picnic was like in your grandparents time, write down their items.

 Roasted pork skin (=gratons)	 Crisps	 Curcuma meat cake (=pâté créole)	 Peanut butter and vegetables sandwich (=sandwich achards dakatine)	 Boiled eggs stew (=carri d'oeufs)
 Pork paws stew (=carri pattes cochon)	 Chinese meatballs sandwich (=pain bouchons gratiné)	 Sausages stew (=rougail saucisses)	 Sweet potato cake (=gâteau patate)	 Sweets (=bonbons)

A picnic today	A picnic in my grandparents'time

Today, we eat .....

My grandparents ate .....

They didn't eat .....
